Dear WHOT Listener

What? You haven't received your official "Hot T-Shirt?" That is not surprising. Several months ago, we sent a top-security bonded courier to a T-shirt printing company--whose location must remain a secret for security reasons--with the official T-shirt design handcuffed to his left wrist. Three hours later, after he was supposed to arrive, he was found half dead in a swamp on Staten Island. He had been abducted at gun point, and left to die. At present the courier is all right, and making great progress with his artificial hand; but the T-shirt design has fallen into devious hands. Apparently, the design was stolen by pirates. These underhanded fiends apparently had the T-shirt printed up and are currently selling them on the black-market. Perhaps you have seen those street vendors outside of department stores or maybe you have been solicited by one of these persons selling the T-shirts from the trunk of his/her car.

WARNING: Do not accept those imitations! Those T-shirts are not authentic. Even as you are reading this letter, police and government agents are on the trail of the official WHOT T-Shirt design. Informed sources say they are closing in on the culprits and we hope the design will be in our possession very soon.

Please be patient, we will send you your T-shirt as soon as we are in a position to have them printed. Do not accept WHOT T-Shirts unless you have been informed by us as to their authenticity. Thank you for being so cooperative and understanding.

Enclosed is the official WHOT Top Twenty Songs of 1984, as compiled by the staff.

much for your cooperation.

Again, thank you ever so

Sincerely

Hank Hayes
